184 GRADUATES RECEIVE DEGREES

Diplomas signed by President Gerald R. Ford were awarded to 138 bachelor degree and 46 master degree candidates on Monday at the College's 111th commencement.

Ten Congressmen personally presented diplomas to students from their states, and several other Congressional offices sent staff representatives to participate in the ceremonies.

Professor E.S. Monterio, the ambassador from Singapore, presented graduate Chin-Heng Lim with his bachelor's degree. Counselors from the embassies of Canada, Ghana, Japan and Nigeria were also in attendance.

SIGNS FOR INTERNATIONAL COMMUNICATION

A departure from the traditional charge to the graduates which typifies most commencement speeches, Dr. Margaret Mead's address focused on a major issue with world-wide implications.

Speaking without notes, Dr. Mead made an argument for the use of a sign language as a viable means of international communication.

As a non-spoken language, signs have a definite advantage as an international language. Unlike any other oral forms of communication, signs can be simultaneously translated.

Dr. Mead drew liberally from her vast experiences with numerous cultural groups to illustrate the need for a universal communication system and why attempts to develop an international language have failed. Esperanto, Dr. Mead points out, is a contrived language based primarily on European tongues and is too complicated for general use.

As Dr. Mead stated in her lecture at Gallaudet in 1973, deaf people are and can continue to make a significant contribution to the development of a workable international language system. She reiterated that standardization of signs must take place first, but the potential for a cross cultural communication is inherent in a language of signs.

VERNON AND HAYS HONORED

Dr. McCay Vernon, professor of psychology at Western Maryland College and editor of the American Annals of the Deaf, and Mr. David Hays, director of the National Theatre of the Deaf and the Little Theatre of the Deaf, both received honorary doctorates at Gallaudet's commencement exercises.

A sharp critic of society's concern and acceptance of deaf people, Dr. Vernon has provided professionals with research information which has served as the basis for improved programs and services to all deaf people.

Through his work with the National Theatre of the Deaf, Mr. Hays has "developed the elegant, heightened version of the language of signs as a new art form and as a new dimension of human expression." He has also "introduced the general public to deafness, to deaf people and to the serious, competitive contribution deaf people can make to art."

A NOTE OF GRATITUDE

Mrs. Elnora Tapscott, the wife of the late Frank Tapscott, would like to make the following expression of thanks to the Gallaudet community:

"The family of the late Franklin E. Tapscott wishes to express its deepest gratitude for the many flowers and gifts that were sent. Words alone cannot express the feelings within our hearts. We knew the type of husband and father Frank was, however, we did not know just how much he meant to all of you.

Whatever God's reasons were for taking him so soon we will never know.

Again, we would like to thank all of you for your kind expressions of sympathy."

AROUND AND ABOUT

--On Monday, May 26, The Silent Skater, a captioned half-hour color special about the World Games for the Deaf held at Lake Placid this February, will be shown over WETA-TV. This broadcast will preempt the Captioned ABC Evening News.

--A bill to establish ten medical scholarships for students who agree to enter family practice in shortage areas was named for Lister Hill, former Senator from Alabama and member of the Gallaudet Board of Directors.

--A three day workshop to focus on the subject of deaf-blindness will be sponsored by the Office of Public Service Programs, June 17-19.
